

PEOPLE's 50 Companies That Care: Employers Who Have Gone Above & Beyond During the Pandemic

Partnering with Great Place to Work, PEOPLE identifies the top U.S. companies supporting their employees and their communities during COVID-19

Radio Flyer Inc.

Employees at beloved red wagon company Radio Flyer appreciated their new perk of an additional 20 paid days off to help with challenges of the pandemic.

“I was completely lost in the beginning of daycare closures, as I didn’t know how I was going to manage care for my daughter and continue to work,” says staffer and new mother Jessica Fechner. “This benefit allowed me to take care of my daughter, while working a reduced schedule—ensuring I didn’t miss a paycheck.”

Employees also give back to the community with two paid days to volunteer through Radio Flyer’s Smile Squad Committee. This year, the company’s partnership with Cradles to Crayons resulted in the donation of 1,000 wagons and trikes to families in the Chicago area.

In the photo: Radio Flyer team members strike a pose outside of their Chicago headquarters on August 27.

